GRADUATION AT JEFFERSON HIGH

Fifty-six members of the Class of 1934 received their diplomas of graduation at the commencement exercises held on last Tuesday evening in the auditorium of the Jefferson Union High School.

The program began promptly at 8:15 o'clock, but long before that time the auditorium was filled to capacity.

The procession of graduates marching to the stage accompanied by music furnished by the combined bands of the high and grammar schools under the direction of Mr. Harry Waters formed a most attractive picture. The girls were dressed in white and each carried an old-fashioned bouquet, while the boys wore dark suits.

Seated on the stage with the graduating class were the members of the board of education, Mr. Truman Bentley, chairman; Mrs. Stella L. Jensen, clerk; Mrs. Lilah Brown, Mr. Adolph Gehringer and Mr. Andrew Vireno; also Principal James Ferguson, Rev. John R. Stevenson and Rev. Doyle, who substituted on the program for Rev. James P. Donohoe, who was absent on account of illness.

As is the custom at Jefferson commencement exercises, there was no outside speaker on the program. Three members of the class, Jean Benner, Anita Mooney and Walter Fati, spoke on subjects that had made particular appeal to them in their course of study, and they acquitted themselves most creditably.

The welcoming address was given by Robert Smith, president of the senior class.

A quartet of girls, Marie Denevi, Mary Jorgensen, Doris Robertson and Peggy Vincent, with Miss Beauel Gibbins as director, sang two delightful songs, "Indian Dawn" by Zamecnik, and "To Sing a While" by Drummond.

Principal James Ferguson presented the graduating class. In addressing them he said in part:

"Up to this time you have had two guardians, the school and your parents. Tonight the legal guardianship of the school ends. When you reach the age of twenty-one the legal guardianship of your parents will also cease. Then you will stand alone.

"The purpose of the guardianship of the school and parents is not for the purpose of destructive restriction—it is for constructive guidance. The school has consulted with your parents on many occasions about your personal welfare. In some cases perhaps it has been about tardiness, or absence, or the doing of some particular task in school. In others, it may have been about the proper choice of a course of study, or the subject of what your life work ought to be. But whatever it was it had as its object the giving of wise guidance to you.

"It is for this purpose of guidance that the state has appointed legal guardians for youth until it reaches its majority.

"But the end of guardianship, whether it be that of school or of parents, does not end the operation of the rules and laws that govern life, and which both school and parents have impressed upon you. The Ten Commandments will be just as binding after you reach your majority and are away from home without any legal guardian as they are now. And the Beatitudes will be just as true and as beautiful as they have always been since they were first spoken by Jesus to the multitude.

"The world will try to have you believe that much of what you have learned in school and at home is old-fashioned, and perhaps is not true. You have learned that two and two make four. But some one will come along some day and tell you that if you buy stock in his company he can guarantee that two and two will make six or eight or perhaps twenty. You have learned in the physics laboratory that two bodies cannot occupy

NINE PER CENT TAKE IS HIGH ENOUGH

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Judging from the widespread interest in the determination of a reasonable amount to be deducted from the pari mutuel wagering pools on the tracks of the state, it is fairly certain that my contention the "take" should be reduced from twelve to nine per cent will win out. No argument with any logical basis has been advanced against my idea. The people are possessed of the notion that the only way racing can survive is to make it a real sporting proposition, and that helps a good deal.

Special pleading undoubtedly will be made for holding to the present proportion of the pools for both the racing associations and for the state. Men going into the game for its promotional possibilities may not be over-enthusiastic over receiving six per cent instead of eight per cent for the share of their associations. A certain coterie may also resist the cutting down of the state's percentage, probably at least for partially selfish reasons.

Indirect benefit to the people of the state from the contemplated "big race" to be financed from one and one-half per cent of the pools is a thing that public minded citizens are beginning to realize is better than the present scheme of trying to raise money for the state by too heavy a commission on the pools. Many of the men and women coming to witness the running of the race will return time and time again.

Enlargement of breeding will follow the expansion of racing through the medium of the "big race" and gradually California will take its old place as the headquarters for blood horse nurseries. There is no telling how prosperous the thoroughbred breeding industry, once one of the leading industries of the state, will become. All this flows from a liberal attitude in determining the "take" at the race courses.

P. T. A. MEMBERS SELECT OFFICERS

On Wednesday, May 23, most of the newly elected officers and chairmen of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. went to the beautiful ranch of the District President, Mrs. J. J. Garland, just west of Menlo Park, to attend the conference for planning the work for the new year. Over 300 officers and chairmen were present from all over the district. After two hours of reports and instructions a delicious luncheon was served, cafeteria style, on the porch. The afternoon was spent socially. Mrs. Garland proved the perfect hostess, and everyone voted the day a huge success. Those attending from this unit were Mesdames Pearl Jones, Maude Hanselman, Fannie Kanter, Ruth McLean, Grace Tallmadge, Ada Eade, Lily Thomy, Anna Legge, Grace Hill, Kathleen Brown, Winifred Evans, Lucy Nelson, Marguerite Woodside

Celebrate Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Kramer, of Acton street, were given a surprise fish dinner of sole and bass, Thursday evening, May 10, honoring them on the fifth anniversary of their wedding. Among other good things to eat was the usual handsome cake with the regular greetings and trimmings. The group who gathered at the Kramer home were members of Steinheart's Aquarium in San Francisco. A handsome wooden coffee table with a tile top was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Kramer by their friends. At a late hour the guests departed, having enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

HORSEMEN PRAISE CONDUCT OF MEET

Marked by a week of feature events, which proved among the most gala and best attended in the history of the track, Tanforan today drew close to the barrier in the Spring meeting which began two months ago. Tomorrow (Saturday) the horses will go to the post in Tanforan's Au Revoir, featured by the Au Revoir Handicap.

The farewell tomorrow will climax a week of interesting events at the San Bruno track, which started with the Memorial Day program, featuring the Memorial Day Handicap. The following day was Irish Derby Day, when a portion of the proceeds was given to the United Irish Societies for their wide-spread welfare work.

Both the holiday and the Irish Derby day were outstanding successes, and the Irish Day, which offered the Haggin Handicap as its principal feature, drew an unusually large number of turf followers. The Derby Day marked the last of a series of benefit races J. W. Marchbank, managing director of the track, has offered during the Spring meeting.

Today Mr. Marchbank paid high tribute to the support the track has received during the present meeting. He said the public clearly had demonstrated that it wants thoroughbred racing, conducted upon a high plane. Never has Tanforan had a more promising or a more important meeting than the one now drawing to a close, he added. By this meeting was gauged, he said, public opinion regarding horse racing. The results have been highly satisfactory, he concluded.

Members of the California Horse Racing Board paid marked tribute to the Tanforan meeting, and to Mr. Marchbank's conduct of the racing. All members expressed satisfaction with the program, and the whole conduct of the track, and added their opinion that it had proved a decided step forward in making California one of America's most important turf centers.

PLACER ACTIVITY INCREASING FAST

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Changing conditions brought about by mining are well exemplified in the revivals in various sections of this country and Canada. As was recently pointed out in newspaper articles, Barkerville, the former "ghost town" of old Cariboo, has increased in population in the last few years in greater proportion than any other town on the continent.

Men coming out of the mining region tell of the spirit of hope that prevails. Only recently, H. B. King, president of Barkerville District Board of Trade, was in Vancouver for a short visit. Mr. King, a young attorney, is one of the leading figures in the thriving community.

Stories are recounted of many little parties, with their possessions piled high on flivvers, making their way to the district where fortunes were taken out of the ground about three quarters of a century ago. The population of Barkerville is rapidly increasing, with about 1,500 in the town itself and in the region roundabout.

About 175 men are employed at Cariboo Gold Quartz alone, and large forces at such well known mines as Richfield Cariboo, Prosperpine, and Shamrock. Not only in lode, but in placer operations, has there been noticeable expansion.

The French Creek Hydraulic Placers is very active. Last year a small clean-up was made and this year, by bringing in a new water supply, a more satisfactory clean-up is anticipated.

The Consolidated Smelters is prospecting placer ground on the Cottonwood River, where camps are being erected. Throughout the district and along the Fraser River are many smaller placer operations. Sidney Norman, in the Vancouver Sun, says the best placer year in recent history is expected in the northern province.

Developing his graphic description of the Rip Van Winkle town, Mr. Norman says:

"Barkerville, the center of all this activity, has taken on an air of near-opulent bustle. There are two hotels doing a thriving business; three general stores; two butcher shops; a grocery store, drug store, two beer parlors and several soda and tobacco establishments.

"The old Theatre Royal, built back in 1869, is now used as a community hall. A volunteer fire department has been organized under the direction of Provincial Police Constable McGillvray, deputy fire marshal, son of a well known oldtimer, Jack McGillvray.

"Mr. King takes particular pride in the fact that graduates of the University of British Columbia are prominent in the revival of the Cariboo.

"According to Mr. King, there is no more interesting area on the continent for a summer outing, as there is scenery without rival, good roads, mining operations of all kinds and hospitality without stint, making the old district a summer joy, with Barkerville, the 'town that came back,' the center from which to radiate to a hundred points of interest."

Gold mining has provided the brightest chapter in Canada during the depression and as the editor of the magazine "Gold" truly says, has enhanced the country's prestige the world over. Increase in the value of mining stocks of fifteen of the leading companies amounts to nearly $650,000,000 in the depression years.

The new cyanide annex to the plant of the Union Mine, Franklin Camp, British Columbia, has been completed. Experiments have shown that a large additional saving will be made after concentration.

Vancouver Gold Mines, Ltd., operating on Vancouver Island, has under construction a new cook-house, freight house, mess hall, drying room, power house, assay and office buildings.

Total obligations incurred for such relief during April were $3,241,782, as against the March figure of $2,391,017, an increase of 35.6 per cent.

The number of family members on relief in April was 472,068 as against 338,244 in March, or an increase of 39.7 per cent. The funds obligated for such family relief in April totaled 2,490,689, or an increase of 42.2 per cent over the March figure of $1,751,577.

The total number of single residents on relief in April was 42,505, as compared with the March figure of 35,188.

POPULAR WOMAN PASSES ON

The many friends of Mrs. Virginia Chandler, of Hanover street, were deeply grieved to hear of her passing away last Sunday after a few months illness. Mrs. Chandler, who passed away at St. Luke's hospital, was the beloved wife of Harrel Chandler, the mother of Harrell Chandler, Jr., and Myrtle Chandler, and the sister of Walter and Milton Taureck. The funeral services were held last Tuesday afternoon from the chapel of H. F. Suhr & Co., on Mission street. Interment was at Olivet Memorial Park.

the same space at the same time. This law will hold good after you have reached the age of twenty-one. If anyone tries to make you believe otherwise, call his attention to what happens when two automobiles try to violate this law.

"Truth is everlasting—it does not change—whether it be learned in school or at home. Sometimes it sounds old-fashioned—but it never changes. How much sorrow and heartache we would be spared if we could always remember this.

"Before receiving your diplomas your last act in school will be to take the pledge of allegiance to the flag of our country. As loyal American boys and girls you are proud of your country. You believe in its republican form of government. It is hardly necessary for me to remind you that in taking the pledge of allegiance you not only promise to obey the laws of your country, but you do more. You enlist on the side of those who will give neither aid nor comfort to those who violate the laws of your country.

"Be loyal to this oath even to the point of being unpopular. For only by so doing can the good name of our country be redeemed from the disgrace that has been brought upon it by the army of criminals now operating within its borders."

The response of the class as it stood at attention and then with hands raised in salute to the flag took the pledge of allegiance to the flag and to the republic for which it stands left no doubt in the minds of the vast audience concerning the spirit of genuine patriotism inculcated in the hearts of the Jefferson Union High School graduates of 1934.

Upon receiving the class presented by Mr. Ferguson to the Board of Education, Mr. Bentley said, in part, that the public school was one of the greatest factors in creating good citizens for the future. He was sure that no name of any member of this graduating class would ever appear on that list of undesirable citizens to which Mr. Ferguson had just referred. These young men and women would always be a credit to their parents and to their instructors, and would reflect honor upon their high school. Upon these graduates it was a pleasure to confer diplomas.

Mrs. Stella Jensen, upon being presented, said:

"It is with a great deal of pleasure that I participate in the presentation of diplomas to the members of the Graduating Class of 1934, first, because it gives me the privilege, on behalf of the Board of Trustees, to congratulate them on the record they have made during the past four years; and, second, because it gives me the opportunity to wish them success and God speed.

"When one is about to take a journey the good wishes of friends add to the pleasure of the journey. So as the members of this class are about to set their feet on unknown paths, I extend to them the sincere good wishes of the members of the Board of Trustees for their success and happiness."

To the parents of these graduates, she said that at no time have parents been called upon to sacrifice to such an extent that boys and girls may have an education.

"But," she continued, "I know it has been a labor of love, and that your loving thoughts, kind wishes and good advice will be with your children, whatever their lot in life may be. Also, may you, as graduates, be ever mindful of the assistance given you by the members of the faculty, whose untiring service has been yours for the asking."

Crocker P. T. A. Attends District International Fair

A number of the members of the Crocker P. T. A. attended the International Fair held by the Seventeenth District in the gymnasium of the San Matoe Junior College, on Friday, May 18. The ladies from Crocker had charge of the Norwegian booth, where they served tuna fish salad in several different forms. Four of the members of Crocker, Mrs. J. E. Walker, Mrs. Nora Clifton, Mrs. Nellie Caine and Mrs. C. Abbott, were dressed to represent Norwegian peasant women. The booths were all attended by women of the different P. T. A. units, dressed to represent different nations of the world, and they each served food common to the nation which they represented.

The grand march was a very colorful affair. All of those in costume were in it. The band of the San Mateo Union high school played several numbers while the ladies were marching, and later played for them to dance.

Crocker was proud to be represented in the program of the day by the rendition of several solos by our own Mrs. Pauw, accompanied by her daughter Corinne. Mrs. Morrish, President of the new Sequoia unit, sang two lovely numbers. Several children, dressed in the different national costumes in honor of the day, danced numbers common to those nations. The ladies "direct from Ireland" danced the Irish jig, and two ladies dressed to represent Thomas Jefferson and his wife, danced the Minuet. Some of the ladies from a San Mateo unit gave a comical song number.

Those who were not present missed a good time. The ten ladies from Crocker who were present pronounced it a very successful fair.

Join the Girl Reserves if you want to enjoy a happy group of girls! Something planned for at least one day every week this summer.

COUNCIL ASKS FOR SHARE OF GAS TAX

A resolution similar to that passed by other cities of San Mateo county was passed by the City Council last Monday night, asking for a portion of the gas tax now given to the county. The resolution points out that a very large proportion of gas tax money is paid by cities, and that the cities are therefore entitled to some of the money for highways and streets.

The request of the League of Municipalities for $60 as Daly City's share of expenses necessary in the League's work of securing proper Federal support was granted.

Engineer Klassen gave a detailed report of the League's efforts and success in behalf of the cities.

Mayor Smith reported that Daly City would receive approximately $900 from the state as its share of liquor license money to date.

A request of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion for a permit for sale of poppies was granted.

A resolution, similar to the resolution adopted in past years was adopted on the recommendation of the Board of Fire Commissioners, permitting the sale of fireworks by established merchants during a twelve day period, under special permit.

Councilman Twesten, for the light committee, reported the need of a street light at the northwest corner of Bruno and Vale streets.

Superintendent Bodien recited experiments now being carried on to determine the best type of material for filling cracks in the street paving, and stated that as soon as satisfactory results were obtained the repairs would be carried on.

Authority was then voted Mayor H. H. Smith to sign a contract with the well drillers, awarded the contract at the previous meeting of the Council.

The meeting was adjourned until Monday, June 4, at 8 P. M.

FAREWELL PARTY

Mrs. H. F. Mapes, of Hanover street, was the honored guest at a farewell party given at the home of Mrs. Richard McDonough, of Winchester street, last Tuesday evening. Mrs. Mapes plans to leave very soon to visit with relatives and friends in Montana. A very pleasant evening was spent playing cards. Delicious refreshments were sereved by the hostess upon the conclusion of the card game. Mrs. Mapes was presented a handsome grey and white leather purse, with an appropriate card, and a very dainty handkerchief. Among those who enjoyed the gay affair were Mesdames E. Miller, E. Frazier, K. Sadler, Elsie Ireton, M. Boyle, Marie Gaiter, Viola Gould, J. McHugh, Anna Mehan, Bessie Gimovsky, Nora Clifton, Marie Parodi, Helen McDonough, Anne Eason, Julia Byrne, and Miss Norine Percell, of Burlingame.

A group of friends from Daly City attended a Southern luncheon and birthday party at the home of Mrs. L. Stang, in Fairfax, Tuesday of last week. Mrs. Stang was presented a handsome Dripolater coffeepot by the following guests: Mrs. B. Wilson, Mrs. D. K. Snyder, Mrs. Helen Grantham, Mrs. R. Shade, Mrs. A. Skov, Mrs. Dora Roberts, Mrs. M. Lang, Mrs. M. Wegner, Mrs. F. Coen, and Mrs. M. Noris, of South San Francisco. The group spent a pleasant afternoon playing whist.

V. F. W. BUDDY POPPY SALE SUCCESSFUL

Memorial Day, Wednesday, May 30, brought to a close the annual sale of V. F. W. Buddy Poppies held throughout the United States. We are mighty happy to announce our sales were successful, considering the present condition of our country. The Veterans of Foreign Wars wish to take this method of publicly expressing their deep appreciation and thanks for the manner in which the citizens and business people aided us in the sale of our Poppies for our disabled comrades and their families.

Old Glory Post No. 2044 held their regular monthly meeting on Friday night, May 25, and among the many things discussed and acted upon were the holding of our annual memorial services for our comrades who have answered taps, and our disabled and needy comrades still in our midst. Mayor H. H. Smith, in honor of his efforts and interest in the veteran and his cause, was elected to honorary membership in this Post, and was initiated at this meeting.

Old Glory Post degree team will hold their benefit dance at Happy-Go-Lucky Hall, in Colma, Saturday night, June 2. Good music has been engaged, the team will be out in whites, and the committee tells us that it will be one dance that will not be forgotten in a long time. There will be attractions, and we are all pulling for the team, as it is the best team in the Department. We cover lots of territory, but it is a big team and covers much territory. Come out and look them over.

The picnic committee is working overtime to make the second annual picnic the greatest in our history. There will be a baseball game between the American Legion and the V. F. W. of Daly City. Here friendship ceases. Some fireworks are assured. There will be pie-eating contests, dancing, races, and many other attractions too numerous to mention in these columns. We will promise you the day of days. Come on and join the Veterans on Sunday, June 10, at Valemar Park, Salada Beach. Come early and stay late. There will be plenty doing.

FRED R. LINSER.

Members of Crocker P. T. A. Attend Class of Instruction

Mrs. J. E. Walker, Mrs. Nora Clifton, Mrs. Nellie Caine and Miss Nettie Moses drove down to the home of Mrs. J. J. Garland last Wednesday, where they attended the class on instruction held each year for the new officers and chairmen. Mrs. Garland, President of the Seventeenth District, has a beautiful home near Menlo Park. The ladies were given their instructions in different places throughout the grounds, which made the day very enjoyable. A pot-luck luncheon was served under the trees. Crocker members were just a part of the large number present, there being close to 400 who attended the affair. Those who were unable to go certainly missed a very enjoyable time.

An application for a marriage license was filed in San Francisco last Tuesday by Joseph P. Bruno, 26, of 1535 Trent street, and Ida M. Silicani, 25, of Colma.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard McDonough and daughter Barbara Jean McDonough, of Winchester street, accompanied by Miss Norine Percell, of Burlingame, motored to San Jose on Memorial Day and spent the day as the guests of Mrs. Anna Bittel.

April State Beverage Tax Will Total $117,734.63

Marking completion of the first year of the California beverage tax under the "New Deal" with respect to the sale of beer and wine, H. G. Cattell, of Pasadena, member of the State Board of Equalization, reports that total collections have been $919,836.13.

Taxes on beer and wine at 2 cents per gallon for the month of April have been assessed at $117,734.63, as contrasted with only $55,670.89 for the same month last year, so that the tax has more than doubled during the twelve month period.

FORD SALES CONTINUE TO SET RECORD IN STATE

Increasing motor sales indicate that California is enjoying a healthy business and that the long discussed "corner" has been rounded, with the automobile industry again leading the way back to prosperity.

Ford sales showed another healthy gain of 70 per cent over April registrations of last year in this state to total 3,312 units for the month, according to Motor Registration News, automobile trade authority. Ford leads the second car for the month by 705 registrations, and is first in sales for the year to date by a wide margin. The sales registrations for the first three makes for the month of April, as reported by Motor Registration News are: Ford, 3,312; Chevrolet, 2,607; Plymouth, 1,908. Continued sales gain by Ford is credited by Ford dealers to the advertising given the economy performance of the Ford V-8 by owners and drivers of the cars.

Recent speedway races have also proved that the Ford V-8 could stand high speeds for long periods of time under the most punishing conditions, and yet come through not only the winner of the speed event, but with the first place positions held by Ford cars even though other cars had started the event in eqqual numbers and on equal terms. This is cited as evidence, by these Ford dealers, that every Ford automobile is equally capable of turning in a championship record on either the speedway, or the highway.

Vote For Tax Redemption

Restoration of a maximum 60 cent maintenance tax for the San Mateo elementary school district had the approval of voters who last Friday balloted 820 to 631 in favor of the proposal. A total of 1,455 votes, a heavy ballot, was cast in the special election necessitated to allow the expenditure under the provisions of the Stewart-Riley bill.

NAMING AMERICA

Modern science and research are repealing so much of what the older generation was taught in school that we may well conclude with John Billings that "it is just as well not to know so much as to know so much that ain't so."

The old text books told us, for example, that America was named for Amerigo (or Americus) Vespucci, an Italian explorer who closely followed Columbus and stole Christopher's thunder.

Now comes an ancient document unearthed in Prague which is said to be a report of his adventures by Vespucci himself, in which the navigator signed his first name as Alberico. Thus, if he were to have been honored in naming the new continent, it should have been called Albercia.

But a further complication has arisen through the assertion of another authority that an Indian tribe of Columbus' time called themselves by a name which sounded very much like "America," and that perhaps the New World got a legitimate name after all.

Anyway, at this late day it probably doesn't make much difference, except to those who like to argue about such things.

FIND THE MIDDLE GROUND

No issue, economic or political, deserves more unbiased and dispassionate attention than does that of silver monetization. The real issue of silver does not belong in politics, nor should it be argued on the basis of sectional prejudice.

The silver advocate points out that higher silver values, made possible by relating the values of silver and gold, would open up vast new avenues for trade, and would stimulate an industry which is normally a major employer and taxpayer and is now in the dolrums.

Enemies of silver monetization answer that it would be possible to so phrase silver legislation that uncontrolled inflation might result, at the expense of American credit. What the qquestion resolves itself into is how to gain the good effects that would follows revaluing silver, and do away with the bad.

In this, as in most other issues, there is undoubtedly a middle ground that, faithfully followed, will benefit all concerned.

Noting sadly that weddings are not what they used to be, Pathfinder suggests that people are now eating the rice and wearing the old shoes themselves.

DEATH'S HEAD ON THE RADIATOR

About one out of every ten of the automobiles that use the public streets and highways should wear as an emblem a large, staring death's head.

It wouldn't be a pretty sight. But it would be an accurate symbol. Ten per cent of motorists are responsible for our gigantic death and injury toll. Not all of them, of course, have an accident every year. But they all take chances. They are irresponsible or incompetent or congentially careless. They drive cars with defective breaks and steering mechanisms and poor lights. They cut in and out of traffic, missing oncoming cars by an eyelash, and feeling a thrill of achievement while doing it. They pass on hills and curves, and regard even the most basic and sensible traffic laws as being inimical obstances which should be avoided whenever possible. They drive at high speeds when road and traffic conditions make it exceedingly dangerous.

And, every year, they leave behind them some 30,000 corpses, and hundreds of thousands of injured persons, whose sole offense was that they happened to be present when the reckless driver was taking one of the chances he didn't get away with.

Yes, there should be the emblem of death on a long line of automobiles which otherwise look no different than any other cars of their kind. This suggestion may make some of the reckless drivers think twice before running a risk the next time.

CRIME'S CONSEQUENCES

Regardless of the particular activities in which we engage, it is natural that we should endeavor to look ahead, with a view to estimating the returns which may be expected. Unfortunately, many do not look ahead at all, or if they do they fail to heed the warnings plentifully supplied by the experiences of others. This is especially true of those who decide to embark upon a life of crime.

Laying aside all moral considerations, and estimating the rewards of a criminal solely in terms of money, health and comfort, it seems strange that any should try to beat such a desperate game. Yet thousands try it and fail.

The daily fear of detection and punishment is often worse than the punishment itself. For this reason, many criminals give themselves up when they can no longer stand the strain. A criminal recently captured, charged with a long list of daring crimes, speaks on the subject with authority. He says:

"I am 30 years old. I began my career of crime ten years ago. Eight of those ten years I have spent in jails and penitentiaries. I have been shot thirteen times with pistols, once with a rifle, and three times with a shotgun. My left shoulder is shot away. My left arm is paralyzed from the elbow to the shoulder. One lung gone. My body is scarred from head to foot with bullet wounds. And I say: 'You can't win.' "

OLD AGE POVERTY

While not a pleasant subject to dwell upon, an occasional look ahead to the conditions which may surround old age would be advisable, even for those whose circumstances in early life are satisfactory and whose future seems secure.

We may well be reminded that nearly 80 per cent of all old people are wholly or partially dependent upon others for support. Yet many of these in early and middle life were prosperous, some even wealthy.

Who can not look about him and see acquaintances who were once the envy of their neighbors, but who through business reverses, accidents, illness or extravagance are now brought to feel the sting of poverty?

Usually such disasters might have been averted by a reasonable exercise of prudence and thrift. Keeping up with one's neighbors in a false display of prosperity is one fruitful source of old age poverty, and there are many others. Much of the mysery which usually accompanies old age might be avoided by looking ahead before it is too late.

THE SEVEN WONDERS

Nearly everyone has heard of the seven wonders of the world, but probably few could name them, and fewer could tell what became of them. Those interested in such things might clip this out for their scrap-book. The seven wonder of the world were so named by Antipater, a writer of Palestine, about 200 B. C., as follows:

The Hanging Gardens of Babylon, destroyed in 484 B. C., more than 100 years before they were listed among the wonders.

The Temple of Diana at Ephesus, burned in 262 A. D.

The Statue of Zeus at Olympus, destroyed in 408.

The Colossus of Rhodes, sold for junk in 653.

The Lighthouse of Pharos at Alexandria, fell in an earthquake in 1475.

The Mausoleum of Artemisia, destroyed in 1402.

The Pyramids of Cheops, the only one of the "Seven Wonders" still in existence.

Such were the seven wonders of the ancient world. Many lists of modern wonders have been made, but a recent writer selects not the perishable works of man, but the discoveries and inventions which have revolutionized civilization. He names the radio, the telephone, the airplane, antiseptics, spectrum analysis and radium. And whether his list is the best that might be made or not, the wonders mentioned will survive as long as humanity exists, bestowing untold benefits upon mankind.

Motorists might well memorize this trite saying of the Pathfinder: "You can beat some of the trains to all of the crossings, and all of the trains to some of the crossings, but you can't beat all of the trains to all of the crossings."

BILLBOARDS BANNED

In view of the nation-wide movement for the curtailment of billboards, particularly those which are offensive to persons living in their vicinity, a decision of a Massachusetts judge is of interest.

The town of Falmouth sought to regulate the erection of billiboards within its limits through zoning laws. Judge Sisk, of Boston, affirmed the right of the town to do this, holding that a billboard is a structure, therefore subject to such regulation.

One of the greatest hindrances to any movement for civic beauty is the billboard nuisance, which obtrudes itself on every hand. While the outdoor advertising industry claims to be making an effort to eliminate billboards where they are objectionable, the fact that it has fought the Falmouth ordinance and other legislation designed to protect the public, sentiment must be aroused if this nuisance is to be abated.

It might be possible to find a location where a billboard would not be objectionable, but we have never seen such a spot.

SEEING NEW SIGHTS

It is difficult to imagine the sensations experienced by persons from isolated sections of the world, particularly island dwellers, when first brought into contact with the facilities of modern life.

A recent dispatch tells of the wonder with which Rachel Gillies, a 17-year-old girl from the Island of St. Kilda, off the English coast, first saw a horse, an automobile, railroad train, and a moving picture, on her first visit to the mainland.

Thousands of people live and die without seeing any of these things, although they live within a comparatively short distance of them all.

But it is not only those who live in sparsely settled localities who are unfamiliar with objects which are commonplace to the great majority. Not long ago a large and curious crowd gathered in a certain section of New York City to see a strange animal which often had been heard of but never witnessed by those who gathered to gaze upon the beast. It was a cow.

A New York doctor says 60 per cent of people have one leg shorter than the other. We assume the high-priced specialist pulls the shorter one.

The problem of disposing of old razor blades has been solved by a Scotch friend. He shaves with them.

Brevity is said to be the soul of wit, but a fellow does not laugh himself to death over a short bank balance.

IF your home is using "a strike a match and wait for water to get warm" kind of water heater, you will be wise in having one of the new Automatic Gas Water Heaters installed now.

The installation of an Automatic entails no fuss or muss. It can be safely vented to an existing flue and it is generally not necessary to change the piping.

A small down payment thereafter gives you immediate installation and use of an Automatic. And then you will have on-tap hot water service in kitchen, laundry and bath in an almost unlimited quantity and at a cost that is less per gallon than the water heater you are now using.

Every day you delay in having the service of Automatic Hot Water means time wasted and convenience sacrificed. Modernize your home by having an Automatic installed. Select the model your home needs today.

OUR GOVERNMENT NOW BEHIND HOME BUILDING

The next major activity of government will be an attempt to stimulate heavy industries — which normally provide the bulk of employment, were hit hardest by depression, and have been the most lethargic in recovering from it. And the first step in doing that will be to unloose capital for home building and repairing, through federal guarantees of mortgages. Mr. Roosevelt has sent special message to congress to expedite such legislation.

Experts estimate that it is possible to unloose credit to the tune of $1,500,000,000 or more in this manner. That money would go to painters, carpenters, masons, plumbers, contractors. It would buy cement, steel, paint, lumber, roofing, electric fixtures. It would pass through a hundred great industries, creating jobs and opportunities as it went. It doesn't take much imagination to visualize the extent of its influence in pulling businesses of all kinds out of the doldrums.

Here's a thought for the wise property owner to start considering right now: If building is greatly accelerated, prices for everything involved are going to rise. They're going to leave depression levels behind and return to the normal average—that, in fact, is one of the cardinal aims at this time. Those who can afford to repair and build now have an opportunity that may never be repeated in their lifetimes.

RECKLESS WALKERS

Are you a safe walker? If you can't make an honest answer in the affirmative your life and health is literally in peril.

Last year automobile-pedestrian collisions accounted for thirty-seven per cent of the 756,000 accidents which occurred on the streets and highways of this country. Deaths resulting from such accidents comprised forty per cent of the total of 29,500 fatalities. In other words, pedestrians were involved in more than a third of all traffic misadventures—and the chance of fatility was greater than in other types of accidents.

Pedestrains crossing in the middle of the block proved the most hazardous—that caused thirty-one per cent of the fatalities. Careless walking on highways was responsible for seventeen per cent. Children playing in the streets came to thirteen per cent. Walking out from behind parked cars into traffic accounted for eleven per cent, with the balance of twenty-eight per cent laid to miscellanous causes.

The careless pedestrian is a menace just as is the careless driver—but he receives less attention. Crossing against signals—playing hide-and-seek with parked cars—walking along rural roads with back to oncoming traffic—these are some of the surest means of courting death. Think over your walking habits—and correct them.

TREMENDOUS SUM SAVED TO CONSUMERS BY RATE CUTS

Electric consumers throughout the United States have been saved a total of $118,747,654 a year by rate reductions between 1930 and 1933, inclusive. This fact has just been announced by the Federal Trade Commission.

The Commission finds that the price of electric service continues to drop steadily. Its records show that while kilowatt hour sales in 1933 increased 3.1 per cent over the 1932 figure, the cost to the consumer was 3.2 per cent less than in the previous year. More electricity for less money.

The Commission's findings are borne out by statistics from other sources. A compilation by an eastern utility executive shows that between January 1, 1929, and September 1, 1933, twenty-six large electric systems, representing 72.3 per cent of the industry in the country, reduced rates by an aggregate of $95,854,407 a year. On this basis, the reductions for the entire industry would total $132,500,000 annually for the period. Needless to say, the Pacific Gas and Electric Company was one of the twenty-six systems included in the compilation.

Women occupy a wider sphere nowadays, but many of them are trying to reduce it.

GAS USED IN BUILDING OF FAST RICKENBACKER PLANE

Gas played an important part in the construction of the Douglas airplane in which Colonel "Eddie" Rickenbacker recently broke all coast-to-coast records for transport planes by flying from Glendale, California, to New York in thirteen hours.

In the plant of the Douglas Corporation in Santa Monica, where Eddie's plane was made, gas is used to melt zinc and lead for making dies, to facilitate and speed up several heat-treating and tempering processes in the metal shops, to prepare solutions in the metal plating department, to make paints and "dope" with which airplane fabrics are chemically treated, to maintain correct and uniform temperatures in drying compartments, to do brazing and soldering.

FOREWORD: This may, perhaps, be called a drama. Beyond that I leave definition to the reader. What is one man's belly-laugh may so easily prove another man's pain in the neck.

We find ourselves in Hollywood, in the private office of one L. Theodore Glitz, associate producer for ABC Films Inc.—albeit the privacy remains somewhat theoretical.

M. Glitz is a man of many duties and must subdue that natural yen for seclusion which all picture people so notably possess.

We discover him at the moment displaying a fine brand of his favorite emotion—reluctance.

Director Leo Stevens wants L. Theodore to give him a five thousand dollar budget extension on his current picture.

The producer hears him calmly and denies him flatly.

This has been going on for quite a while when we achieve our first earful.

DIRECTOR STEVENS: I tell you, the scenes I need this money for have got to be in! They represent the show's big punch—the climax—everything!

PRODUCER GLITZ: Yeah? So why don't you shooting them first then?

STEVENS: You know d—n well I never work that way! Sequences get taken in their proper order, and that's one of the main reasons every picture I turned out last year was so much better than anything—

GLITZ: Say, didn't you get your salary for last year?

STEVENS: (blankly): Why, sure; but what—

GLITZ: Then don't be talking about what you did then! It's now you're wasting my dough, ain't it?

(Stevens gets another blast started, but we miss his words in the sudden uproar. The door has swung violently open and two desperate young men are trying vainly to hold back three energetic young women. In a jiffy the latter are crowding around L. T., jabbering in perfect unison. Maybe we can pick it up piecemeal)

FIRST YOUNG MAN: I demand my right, Mr. Glitz! Nobody can get fresh with me or—

SECOND YOUNG MAN: Bert Leroy is a louse! He put his dirty hands on me and—

THIRD YOUNG MAN: If you don't fire him right now, I'll raise a stink that--

(From out the welter emerges Leo Stevens, countenance magenta, arms awave. He flings about savagely, giving off a deal of language that would only sully this page to record. Meanwhile, the producer has evoked comparative quiet. That is, only he and one of the girls are talking at once)

GLITZ: Well, why don't you socking him in the puss?

FIRST GAL: (They're all dressed, now we notice, in nothing but large facsimiles of liquor labels, done in gauze and beads): I don't have to hang around this crummy dump and take insults from a rat like him. We originated our specialty dance in this Spirit of Repeal number, and we can take it to some other studio.

GLITZ: Okay, little lady, I see what you mean and I'll fixing it up immediate. Now just run along and take yourselves a vacation for today. Tomorrow I promise you everythiug is jake and Leroy don't bother you no more.

(They murmur a bit longer, but shortly he's purred them right out of the office. Stevens rushes back, but Glitz is busy with the phone)

GLITZ: Give me Sam Klein in the legal department. . . Hello, Sam—Theodore speaking. I want you should right away copyright all the steps and costumes in Leroy's new dances—particular the Spirit of Repeal. You can get pictures from him. And listen; tear up the contracts of anyone who ain't on the set when you go over there; see?

He hangs up and sits back, utterly placid)

STEVENS: (Introducing just a touch of wheedle): Now, L. T., just authorize those few extra dollars, and we can both get back to work.

GLITZ: This is my work. Ain't I built a career arguing birds like you down?

STEVENS: (the lid's off again): Yes, you short-sighted, haggling imbecile—that's all you know how to do! Here I throw my whole soul into creating a marvelous production, and then have to wear myself out pleading for a pittance. God, the mockery of it!

(That door has burst open again; this time it's a pair of oddly assorted chaps in deshabille. One is enormous and nearly bald; the other slight, sleek-haired and intense looking. The second hurries over to seat himself at the grand piano by the windows. The huge one hovers over Herr Glitz)

LARGE GENT: (rapturously): L. T., listen—sit still—hold your breath! Get ready for the biggest thing that's ever happened in music, even from us. It's called "Sapphires in the Starlight." All right, Phil—go ahead.

(Phil obeys, tumbling over the keys in a sort of berserk abandon, while the other gives voice. It really turns out to be a pretty nice little song, at that, considering its daring novelty: the sapphires are "your eyes," and starlight "the light of love for me." Soon it's ended, and the two composers are facing Glitz expectantly)

GLITZ: Boys, that's nice. What is it—a rumble?

PHIL (wailing): No, no—waltz, L. T.! Don't you get it? Da-da-de-de-dum, dum-dum-de-de-da. See?—perfect three-four time.

GLITZ: Oh, sure! All right, boys; we'll find for it a spot in the next musical. So long.

LARGE GENT: Wait a minute, L. T. This is more than just another tune; it's a cinch hit. Couldn't we rate a better deal on royalties?

GLITZ: Nix, nix; you know how the contract reads on that.

PHIL: Well, then how about a little salary raise for this piece?

GLITZ: Stop it, boys. There ain't no raises being passed out in times like this. Now scram along, please.

(They take it with a shrug and a sigh, and depart. Instantly the director, who's been fretting himself up to a real peak, resumes the attack)

STEVENS: Dammit, man, you let every petty interruption take precedence over this vital matter I want settled! Will you for the love of heaven give me an order for that additional five thousand?

GLITZ (precisely the same as an hour ago): Positively no, Leo. I ain't tossing away no more gelt on that show. You gotta find some other way to get by.

(That's all Stevens can stand, at least for one session. He lets go one purple oath, deliberately knocks a row of books onto the floor, and storms from the room. Now for a moment L. Theodore Glitz is done—a paunchy, sallow, rather forlorn appearing little man in that ornate place. Then the phone rings)

GLITZ (into it): Yeah? . . . Sure—of course I will, baby . . . You want what? . . . Oh—okay . . . So? Hum, I see . . . I see . . . I should say not! . . . Why, absolutely you get it! Now—love papa a little? . . . Heh, heh; that's swell! . . . G'by, sweetie-bunch.

(Restoring the instrument, he turns at once to the dictograph at his elbow and snaps its switch. We hear a hollow sound from the screened box, and then L. T. is speaking, his tone again that of the dynamic and commanding captain)

GLITZ: Take some notes: Tell Sam Klein I said he should find a way to break Bert Leroy's contract. The dirty skunk didn't have Sheba Desiree's couch ready for her on the set today. And also telling him to fix Sheba up a new salary agreement at fifty per cent raise. She can't afford to learn a dance for every picture at three thousand a week only. Then another thing yet: See her director gets fifty thousand extra allowance to make more close-ups of Sheba. She says they give that punk that's playing opposite almost a third as much footage as her!

Airplanes Drop Poison on Swarming Locusts

A new method of attack is to be tried against the swarms of locusts which trouble Africa. An airplane, with its wings spouting poison dust—finely ground sodium arsenite—is to fly back and forth in front of the advancing army of insects, to lay a barrage of death. The man who will spread the poison is H. H. King, formerly chief entomologist of the Sudan government, and his method will be tried in northern Rhodesia.

The locusts have long brought wholesale destruction to crops on the continent, writes a correspondent in the New York Herald Tribune, their damage in tropical and sub-tropical Africa being estimated at £1,500,000 annually. Their swarms have been noted at sea 1,200 miles from land, and one cloud which crossed the Red sea in 1889 was reported to be about 20,000 square miles in extent.

To date there has been no completely successful method of locust annihilation. The usual method of attack in dealing with the desert locusts is to kill them in the immature (hopper) stage by means of poisoned baits laid on the ground. However, this does not work well in the case of the migratory locusts, as the hoppers of this species do not partake of the bait readily.

Several groups in England have been working to eliminate the locust plague. The Royal Aircraft establishment, the Imperial Institute of Entomology, and the chemical research department of the war office, all have aided the locust control committee of the economic advisory council.

New Uses for Cotton Lint

Russian chemists have developed a method of removing the short fibers or "linters" from cottonseed by the use of gaseous hydrochloric acid, and are now looking for new uses for the lint, once a waste product of cottonseed. They expect to produce about 85,000 tons a year from the cotton crop of Middle Asia. Chemically, linters are nearly pure cellulose. Large quantities are used in this country in the production of artificial silk, cellophane and other cellulose products.—Literary Digest.

Fashions for Juvenile Smart Set

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SUMMERTIME means vacation time, which brings clothes-planning time to hand for mothers who would dress their style-conscious children fashionably and appropriately.

Since camp life plays so important a part in the modern child's life, it might be well to consider the clothes question from that point of view. Designers of juvenile sportswear declare there is an increasing tendency to feature bright color in camp and playtime apparel. Because materials are strong and sturdy is no reason why they cannot be gaily colorful and attractive. So, the cotton broadcloths, the poplins, the gabardines and the argentine cloth which serve so admirably for children's recreation and everyday utilitarian clothes are coming out in unusually cheerful hues this season.

For youngsters who romp through woods and climb and wade and attend "gym" classes the idea of shorts, with inner bloomers that are brought up high so as not to be visible, is advocated. The newest shorts are pleated at front and back so as to give the appearance of a skirt.

After play hours, what then to wear? Why not a cunning tailored ensemble, on the order of the clever three-piece which the pretty little girl, to the left in the picture, is posing? The ensemble theme is being played up enthusiastically for children this season. Being so interchangeable with blouses and such, it is a guarantee of a well-dressed appearance for most any child at most any hour of the day. In fact, an outfit like this may be considered almost an entire wardrobe in itself.

With the jacket on, this lilliputian tailleur of marine blue flannel looks as modish as mother herself wears on cool days and on shopping tours. Looks nice, too, with the coat removed, for that wee button-up-the-front blouse of matching blue flat crepe is most wonderfully chic.

The older girl in the picture, who is helping little sister don her smart jacket, has on a sleeveless dress which also admits of interchangeable blouses. The one she is wearing while she poses for her photograph is a Mexican-stripe wash silk. Of course it would have to be stripes, for they are smart for everybody, old and young, this season.

Style interest in little girls' dresses is said to center around necklines and sleeves in the newer models. Which accounts for the wide pleated collar which finishes the neck of the wee frock of pale pinkish soft taffeta which the tot to the right in the group is wearing. You will note also that the sleeves are fancifully smocked. The vogue for taffeta has extended into the juvenile realm. If you prefer pastel crepes they are equally as good style for tiny folks' party frocks.

WATCH NECKLINES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A change in necklines is in progress. High cut fronts are giving way to low cut fronts after the order of the charming neckline which graces the gown pictured. This stunning cafe dress is fashioned of a handsome chiffon of bemberg. Its beautifully molded-to-the-figure silhouette, together with its interesting low-front neckline, make it outstanding in midsummer costume collections. Slim, long sleeves accented by three tiers of fine pleated net ruffles and a soft satin bow are intriguing details.

PLEATING IS USED QUITE EXTENSIVELY

There is much pleating in use now and it isn't all used for neckwear, although it does seem as though nothing fluffier than neckwear would be found. Ruffles and frills galore are lovely on some and so absurd on others. Narrow side pleatings can, however, be worn by almost any figure, which is not true of the draped polonaise.

The time has come to speak a word in favor of brown. The season is so clearly a blue one that women have been inclined to underestimate the high style interest in brown. During the first showings of the imports for midsummer brown was impressive and something of a surprise for, by that time, women were so happy that it was a blue year.

With the interesting brown and white, brown and grege and brown and beige prints, came lovely costumes in which yellow and brown were pleasantly associated.

Brown Still in Picture as Nifty Summer Color

While it is true that navy and black are leaders in spring fashions for daytime, it becomes increasingly apparent that brown is to be reckoned with. It is an important color by itself and especially in prints, particularly printed crepes.

The brown prints are featured in separate frocks, in jacket costumes and also in long coat ensembles and redingotes, and it's interesting to observe the definite favor shown combinations of plain and printed crepes, featuring brown shades.

A favorite version is the jacket costume with monotone skirt, worn with printed jacket and bodice, and costumes of this sort are attractive when done in polka dots, dots in dime or quarter size. Brown with white is then the favored combination.

Straw Cloth Appears

Straw cloth is a new material that has all the ear-marks of novelty with the more stable benefits of practicability. It consists of cellophane woven on artificial silk.

"Well, stay awake then, but I shan't."

Flinging his clothes hastily in every direction, Neal sank down beside her and was instantly dead to the world. Two hours later he was abruptly aroused by a heavy pounding on the door and staggered to his feet still drunk with slumber.

"Yeah,"—Anne, who had not closed her eyes heard him saying through a gingerly opened crack—"I guess so. All right, I'll be there right away." He closed and locked the door again and began to gather up his garments from the floor, and put them on.

"I hoped I'd have time for a shave and a shower," he muttered, "but I'm needed right away. You can get to Madison Square garden all right alone, Anne, can't you? I've left your ticket on the mantelpiece. Don't lose it. It might be snatched right out of your hand. Well, goo'-by."

It was only a little after seven and he was gone again. The hubbub in the next room had worn itself out. Anne began to grow drowsy but, almost immediately, she was shaken into consciousness by a band which, from the noise it made, appeared to be passing directly beyond the foot of her bed.

It was, of course, in the street outside. She went to the window and watched it go by, a glitter of braid and brass. Then resigning herself to the impossibility of resting, she rang for coffee and Dora.

At ten, clutching her precious ticket, she left her room, waited fifteen minutes for an elevator not already too crowded to take her in, threaded her way breathlessly through the crowd in the lobby, even denser than it had been the night before, and after another long wait secured a taxi. The driver turned at a most perilous crossing to transfix her with a piercing glance:

"You gonna woik fer our candidate, lady?" he queried; and giving his wheel a sharp twist, added, "You better—we're gonna keep you here 'til ya' do."

He set her down at an entrance which was apparently impenetrable and flanked with eight policemen.

"Where's your button?" one asked abruptly.

Thinking she had misunderstood, Anne showed him her ticket, but, mindful of Neal's injunction, without relaxing her grasp on it.

"Naw—I don't mean that—ain't you got a button with a certain pitcher on it?" Anne shook her head a little bewildered. "Well, before you come back next time, get yourself one. But go along in now."

She found herself in the basement. There was a clatter of typewriters rising from a string of crowded press rooms, a clicking of telegraph instruments, messengers darting to and fro, a blondined young woman presiding over a cigar stand, delegates almost covered with badges and ribbons, more clusters of policemen. Beside large black letters, painted on squares of stiff cardboard, proclaiming themselves as guides to certain sections, steep staircases led to vague upper regions. Anne was so confused that it took her some time to find her own rabbit-warren. But at last, flushed and triumphant, she emerged on the platform and looked around.

Without further difficulties Anne found her seat, an excellent one between Mrs. Lassiter and Mrs. Lee. They greeted her cordially.

A gavel thudded suddenly down. A bishop began to pray, the national anthem sounded. Klieg lights blazed. A small, neat man with glasses balanced so precariously on his nose that he was forced to keep pushing them back toward his short-sighted eyes, read resolutions, figures and statistics. The chairman of the national committee introduced the temporary chairman, and this gentleman made an impassioned plea to God and the convention to deliver him from the party in power. His fervor amounted to frenzy. He mopped his brow, and threw out his arms. But his audience remained calm. Anne saw several men looking at their watches, and in the press gallery, some bored looking reporters sauntered away from their seats. Anne, her own attention wandering, noticed the very fine sapphire that Mrs. Lassiter was wearing and realized that she was hungry. She had expected, of course, that Neal would come and take her out to lunch. But when the welcome adjournment came, she had still seen nothing of him, and friends bore her triumphantly away. The forenoon session came and went. The permanent chairman, efficient and belligerent, assumed control of the convention with a few volcanic remarks. The committees on membership and rules made their reports. The band played. The policemen clustered. The broadcaster continued to speak earnestly and enthusiastically into his machine. At last, genuinely worried, Anne approached Senator Lee, who had joined his wife, and asked if he thought "anything could have happened to Neal."

He laughed reassuringly. "My dear lady, your husband is one of the 'key' men. He can't be spared for window-dressing like this. He has to work."

"But isn't the work being done here at the convention?"

Senator Lee laughed again. "Certainly not. What made you think it was? Because we sang the 'Star-spangled Banner' and shed tears about Shaw's administration? There is a bitter fight over the platform and a bitterer one over the candidate. Those are the real issues."

He appeared to be about to say something more along the same line but checked himself at the sight of Anne's clouded face.

"Don't worry, Mrs. Conrad," he added gently, "and be as patient with your husband as you can if he seems to neglect you; and—by the way— I wouldn't plan on getting away from here this week if I were you."

The bitterness of the fight on the platform became increasingly evident. The papers carried huge black headlines about it. The band played familiar tunes that were becoming to sound tiresome and silly, to fill in gaps in the program; a famous humorist cracked jokes that permeated from the press section to the rostrum; the permanent chairman bristled more and more. At last it was announced that no agreement having been reached, a majority and a minority report would both be submitted. There was a day of oratory and eloquence and hysteria; of plays to the gallery and appeals to sectionalism. It ended as it had begun, in confusion and hard feelings, and dramatic instability.

Anne, going back to the hotel after it was over, with a violent headache, found Neal sitting beside the marble-topped "center table" of their "parlor," with a sandwich in one hand and a pencil with which he was scribbling illegible characters on a plump pink senate block in the other.

"Hello," he said cheerfully, "the worst is over. I am a human being again. And I might say in passing, you have been a brick— as usual—during these last few days while I haven't been like a human being. Are you pretty tired?"

"Rather. It's all been so futile and ugly. I believe I won't go to the evening session."

"I'm sorry—I thought we might go together. The fact is—I am going to make a speech. There seems to be a sort of feeling that—well, that if I did I could straighten out this platform tangle."

"Oh Neal, really? Then, of course, I'm going."

"Good! I hoped you would, and I thought we might have dinner—a real dinner—on the roof first. I hear it's cool and pleasant up there. Snap into the tub and out again and you'll feel better."

As she moved away, slipping her crushed dress over her shoulders, she had the curious impression which she had had a few days before when Senator Lee was talking to her, that Neal had intended to say something else and then decided against it. She turned and found that he was looking after her fixedly and suddenly she thought there were tears in his eyes. She went back to him.

"You are sure," she asked softly, "that nothing is the matter?"

"No, dear, nothing," he answered, and began to scribble again on the block of paper.

CHAPTER XIV

The speech which Neal Conrad made before the great national convention in Madison Square garden—clear, convincing, courageous, charming and incomparably dramatic, awoke the torpid delegates, soothed the angry alternates, and stirred the restive galleries in an applause that rocked the very foundations of the mammoth structure. Incidentally it also resulted in the immediate adoption of the majority report of the platform committee.

The following morning Senator Lee sought Anne out, with an enormous bundle of newspapers under his arm —"I thought you might have slept late this morning," he said, smiling, "and so have had no time for these before you came over. It might interest you to look at them. Not only at the front pages, but at the editorial pages."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Just Like Others

The lower Yukon natives greatly humor their children. The youngsters are not compelled to perform tasks and are given everything they cry for, according to a traveler in that region, who recounts that the teacher at one of the villages asked a native father why his son did not attend school. "Oh, he say he no feel like it," the father replied.

SAYS POWER RATE SURVEY CAN DO A REAL SERVICE

The San Francisco Chronical endorses the idea of a federal investigation of electric rates throughout the country, providing the investigation will bring out the variations according to locality and the differences between the charges made by privately owned and publicly-owned plants.

"Such a survey," says the Chronicle, "can reduce to a common accounting basis the returns of all these concerns and make a genuine comparison of each group as it stands on its own feet. But it can do this only if such is the intention. There can be no comparison unless all the power systems are compelled to make their returns on the same accounting basis. Such comparison is never possible now because the privately-owned utilities conduct their accounting on one basis and the publicly owned on another.

"The privately-owned power concern are compelled by regulatory bodies to keep their books on a standardized accounting system which shows everything.

"The publicly-owned power concerns not being subject to the authority of regulatory bodies, keep their books on their own individual systems, which usually conceal something and frequently conceal a great deal. Politicians figure that what the people don't know won't hurt them."

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

Note: This is a weekly report from the San Mateo County Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importanec for health protection and a list of all contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week, as required by law.

Cook Pork Thoroughly!

Our attention has been called to two cases of trichinosis (pork-worm infection) in highly intelligent women who made the mistake of allowing very small amounts of uncooked pork to enter their stomachs.

In the first case, that of a prominent nurse, chopped beef, pork and onions were mixed by hand, and she ate several of the larger pieces of onion without realizing that there might be danger in the minute amount of raw pork adhering to them. Soon after she was taken very ill and a diagnosis of trichinosis was made.

Since this disease can only be contracted by eating raw pork (or incompletely cooked pork), there is no question but that the above described source was the cause of her infection.

In a more recent case, a housewife was cooking pork sausage and tasted one or two small quantities to see if it was done.

Trichinosis is a serious infection which is extremely painful and often causes death. If care is taken never to get any pork into the stomach which is not thoroughly cooked, the disease in humans would be wiped out completely.

In hogs, the disease is very prevalent and probably cannot be completely controlled. One reason why it is so prevalent is the lack of interest which the general public takes in destroying rats. Rats get the infection from eating food contaminated by hog droppings, and hogs, in turn, get infected by eating dead rats. Since the hog is in the habit of eating almost anything within reach, the only way to break this vicious circle is to eliminate the rats. Not only are our garbage dumps heavily infested with rats, but right in the hearts of our most populous cities, rats are now living practically unmolested. They cause great destruction because they are voracious eaters, and wherever there are rats there is also an ever present danger of plague epidemic, as plague is spread by fleas from infected rats.

HAROLD E. MORRISON, M. D.,
County Health Officer.

The Veteran Firemen of Daly City will meet this Friday evening, June 1, at their regular meeting place.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, and beautiful floral offerings received from our many friends and neighbors in our sad bereavement in the loss of our beloved mother and grandmother, Mrs. Augusta Scheel.—Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Scheel and Family, and Mrs. Elizabeth Hatzke.

Daly City P. T. A. Units Hold Joint Installation

The President of the Crocker P. T. A. wishes to extend her thanks to all those who attended the joint installation for the different P. T. A. units in the Jefferson school district. The affair was well attended, and very interesting. It started with the Salute to the Flag and the singing of the P. T. A. song.

Mrs. J. J. Garland, the Seventeenth District President, was the installing officer. She made the work very impressive.

Mrs. Bentley, President of the Jefferson Union High School P. T. A., introduced the honored visitors. Those introduced from the platform were Mr. Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union high school, who welcomed the P. T. A. units to the Jefferson Union high; Mrs. Spann, Past President of the Seventeenth District, was introduced and led in the salute to the flag. Mrs. Bartlett, Junior Past President of the Seventeenth District, was also introduced. At the conclusion of the installation, Mrs. Garland, Mrs. Bartlett and Mrs. Landini presented the Crocker, Woodrow Wilson and Colma outgoing presidents, respectively, with their Past President pins.

Mrs. Stella Jensen, one of the members of the High school board, acted as master of ceremonies, announcing the program which preceded the installation. This program was divided into three parts. The first part was two accordion duets by Elio Fontana and Elvo Lazzarini. These boys are very clever, and everyone enjoyed the numbers they played. Those present would have liked to have heard more.

Four dance numbers were presented by Jean Durkee, Conchita Morales, and Virginia Callsen. Virginia and Jean gave solo numbers. Mrs. Talmage accompanied the dancers.

The last of the program was vocal numbers by Mr. McGregor and Mrs. Orvilla Dew Pauw. These singers were both well received. Mr. Broom was Mr. McGregor's accompanist, and Mrs. Pauw was accompanied by her daughter Corinne.

The installation was closed by the singing of "America."

Crocker P. T. A. Entertains The Graduating Class

The Crocker P. T. A. was the hostess to the graduating class at Dreamland Rink last Friday, May 25. The class arrived at the rink before it opened, and as soon as they could don skates began to have a glorious time. Mrs. Katch and Miss Nettie Moses were the chaperones for the party and had almost as good a time watching the class have a good time as the members of the class had themselves. There was a great deal of disappointment when the manager had the closing tune played at 4 o'clock, but when his attention was called to the time, he apologized and told them he had made a mistake in the time. The children were thoroughly satisfied when the time was extended to 5 o'clock. They all enjoyed the day so much that it is possible they wish they were graduating again next term also, so they could repeat the affair. The party was a huge success.

A group of friends attended the first wedding anniversary reception of Mr. and Mrs. M. Noris, of South San Francisco, last Tuesday evening. The happy couple were presented a handsome electric toaster by the following friends and guests: Mr. and Mrs. W. Skov, Mr. and Mrs. W. Grantham, Mr. and Mrs. F. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. I. Roberts and Mr. and Mrs. J. Sheldon, of San Mateo. The evening was spent in playing cards.

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, will hold its regular meeting next Wednesday evening, June 6. Everyone be sure to attend.

The estate of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, aunt of Ogden L. Mills, former secretary of the treasury, was valued at $18,589,916, according to an appraisement on file last Saturday. Mrs. Reid died April 29, 1931, in France, and shortly after her will was filed in Redwood City.

The above instrument is a radio tube tester of latest design. It incorporates a self contained audio amplifier and speaker which will test noisy tubes. Large meters can be read by anyone. MINING NOTES

Reports from Hyder are to the effect that in the development work of the Dunwell mine a vein of ore six to eight feet wide has been uncovered which runs two and one-half ounces of gold per ton, says the Alaska Weekly. At the Big Missouri Mine ore is now being put into the bunkers of the mill, which it is said is being prepared for operations.

B. D. Stewart, supervising mining engineer of the Bureau of Mines in Alaska recently left his Juneau headquarters for Anchorage to confer with Alaska Railroad officials in a consulting capacity regarding the reopening of the Eska Coal Mine in the Matanuska field. The mine, opened some fifteen years ago by the United States navy, has been closed for many years and is at present under control of the Alaska Railroad. The reason for considering the opening of the mine at this time for emergency use is said to be that there is only one mine producing suitable grades of coal for use in the operation of the government-owned railroad.

The Grange Mine, one of the outstanding properties among the new producers of gold bullion in the Cariboo District of British Columbia, located on Fraser River near Kelly Creek, is rushing development preparatory to increasing the output. Reports from the property are to the effect that good ore has been encountered on the hanging wall and a snoot of exceptionally good ore has been opened up on the No. 2 level. The management has begun to stope on the fifth level on excellent ore.

Matthew M. Reese, well known mining engineer and geologist from the United States, returned to Vancouver recently from a trip of inspection of a number of properties of which he is acting in the capacity of consulting engineer, in the Cariboo District of British Columbia. Mr. Reese, in company with other eminent geoligists, frankly likes the farmation of the mineralized structure of the Cariboo section and is not backward in predicting a long life of lode mining for the famous old placer camp.

The West Coast Mineral Association in carrying out its information and educational program is conducting a series of lectures illustrated and otherwise descriptive of the mineral resources of Washington, Alaska and the adjacent regions. In periods of financial and industrial stagnation and uncertainty such as that through which we are passing the attention of the western people has turned to mining of the precious metals, and through increased production of the same have brought back a consistent activity and attendant prosperity.

Thomas Ashby, pioneer mining man of Alaska and now a resident of Juneau, on May 11 celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his arrival in Juneau. He has resided in the North ever since that time and was in the Yukon more than a decade before the Klondyke was discovered.

California Gasoline Tax For April is $3,643,836

California's gasoline taxes for last month amounted to $3,643,836.19, exceeding the April collections for the past three years, according to an announcement made last week by H. G. Cattell, of Pasadena, member of the State Board of Eqqualization. Last April's tax surpassed that for April, 1933, by $288,387.22, marking a gain of 8.5 per cent.

"Comparisons of monthly distributions of motor vehicle fuel for years prior to 1931 cannot be made readly from our records," Cattell explained, "because the tax was not paid on a monthly basis until April of that year. Before then, oil companies made their returns to the board for quarterly periods."

With everything set for ner wedding to Charles Baker, Marjorie Wetherell, of Oakland, Cal., told him she had changed her mind. Baker asked her to appear for the ceremony, promising that he would not show up, and Marjorie agreed. When the time came, Baker was there, and she was so flabbergasted that she married him. Now she is suing him on one of the strangest "breach of promise" cases on record.

Baby Sue Trammell, who was rushed from Texas to Baltimore by airplane for an emergency operation for water on the brain, is almost fully recovered and has returned home.

The late Tom Watson of Georgia once declared that "the whole secret of success in politics is to remember that it is impossible to exaggerate the stupidity of the public." The bunk which certain politicians succeed in making the voters believe convinces us that old Tom was more than half right.

A butterfly's wings expand from miniature to full size within a few minutes after the insect emerges from its chrysalis.

Germany, home of the Zeppelin, has produced an ice glider with a hull designed like a dirigible as the latest construction of an ice yacht.

It is perfectly legal to share in a criminal's gains if you happen to be his lawyer, says a wisecracker.

Avoid Wet Brakes

By "setting" the brakes when the car is being washed there is less chance of the brake linings becoming water-soaked and causing temporary loss of braking efficiency, according to the Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. In any event, brakes should always be tried immediately after the car leaves the wash rack to make sure that they will hold.

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, JUNE 1, 1934 NUMBER 45

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

The hard boiled captain had knocked one of his sailors overboard.

"Help! Help!" yelled the seaman. "I can't swim. Drop me a line."

The captain leaned over the rail and said:

"Oh, yes, dear, and you write sometime, too."

Try our Aberdeen Coal.

"What kind of a dog is that?" asked the friendly lady of the little boy with a mongrel pup.

"He's a police dog," said the lad.

"Why, he doesn't look like a police dog," said the lady.

"No, ma'am," said the lad. "You see, he is in the Secret Service."

The day before she was to be married the old negro servant came to her mistress and intrusted her savings to her keeping.

"Why should I keep it? I thought you were going to get married," said the mistress.

"So I is, Missus, but do you s'pose I'd keep all dis money in de house wid dat strange nigger?"

Cement, rock, sand, gravel, etc.

"Mother, what's a stepmother?"

"Well, if I were to die and your father married again, the lady would be your stepmother."

"Oh, I see. You'd step out and she'd step in."

"I'm going to divorce the most nagging woman in town."

"G'wan! How can you divorce my wife?"

First Imbiber: "I found (hic) a half dollar."

Second Inebriate: "It's mine; it'sh got my name on it."

"An' what'sh your name?"

"E Pluribus Unum."

"Yeh, it's yoursh."

Clothes Lines and Pulleys.

"Just think, while I was out with some of the fellows the other night, a burglar got into our house."

"Did he get anything?"

"I'll say he did. My wife thought it was me coming home."

"Sterling," the wall board of satisfaction.
